

Directed by Ian Dewar

This light-hearted presentation of sketches, songs, playlets, etc., proved a success for EYTC. From the bright opening number (led by a soloist of great future promise) through comedy items, an excellent Broadway number, G & S interludes and one-act plays, the evening passed all too quickly for me. Many of EYTC's youngsters are now well-experienced players and this clearly showed in their positive attitudes and audience-attack.

The Company goes from strength to strength and indeed I believe that this performance was just about the best of the many shows I have seen from them. I look forward to their presentation of "Annie" in August.

It's the right mixture

REVIEW: Young At Heart — Broughton High School .

EDINBURGH Young Theatre Company's latest show is a mixture of song, comedy sketches and two short one-act plays.

From the outset the cast tear into the material with energy and enthusiasm, while some of the solo singing spots are memorable.

Throughout the show it is the music that provides the highlights.

Studded with comic sketches and each act containing a short play "Young At Heart" is great fun and diverse enough to keep everyone interested.

Until Saturday.
